- To be treated with courtesy, respect, dignity, privacy, responsiveness, and timely attention to their needs regardless of age, race, sex, national origin, religion, physical handicap, cultural or personal values and beliefs.
- To every consideration of their privacy and individuality as it relates to their social, religious, and psychological well-being.
- To confidentiality of all medical information, records, and personal information protected under the full extent of the HIPAA laws. This includes the right to approve or refuse the release of information to any individual outside the facility, except in the case of transfer to another healthcare facility, or as required by law or third party payment contract.
- To receive care in a safe, secure environment that is supported by infection control and security services, and to have access to protective services.

- To express grievances or complaints regarding treatment or care that is (or fails to be) furnished without fear of reprisals or denial of care.
- To have all procedures fully explained in terms they understand prior to the start of the procedure. Explanation is to include diagnosis, treatment and prognosis, projected recovery time, any alternative treatments or procedures, and the possible risks and side effects associated with treatment. If medically inadvisable to disclose to the patient such information, the information is given to a person designated by the patient or to a legally authorized individual.
- To make decisions regarding the health care that is recommended by the physician. The patient may accept or refuse any procedure, medication, or treatment, and will be informed by a practitioner of the medical consequences of any refusal.
- To continuity of health care. The physician may not discontinue treatment of a patient as long as further treatment is medically indicated, without giving the patient sufficient opportunity to make alternative arrangements.

If a patient is adjudged incompetent according to state health and safety laws by a court, the rights of the patient are exercised by the person appointed under state law to act on the patient's behalf. If a state court has not adjudged a patient incompetent, any legal representative designated by the patient in accordance with state laws may exercise the patient's rights to the extent allowed by state law.

Advance Directives:

Northwest Weight & Wellness Center supports an individual's rights to make informed health care decisions, including the right to accept or refuse treatment and the right to formulate advance directives. It is the policy of Northwest Weight & Wellness Center that DNR orders be suspended while you are a patient at the center. In the unlikely event of a life-threatening emergency, professional staff will initiate resuscitation or other stabilizing measures and transfer you to an acute care hospital for further evaluation, regardless of the contents of any advance directives, existing DNR orders, or instructions from a health care agent or family member. At the acute care hospital, further treatment or withdrawal of treatment measures already begun will be ordered in accordance with your wishes or advance directives.

If you have an advance directive, you may notify your physician and bring a copy of it to the Surgery Center so that it may be included in your medical record.
